MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT
Garry Milton

In the last Newsletter I wrote about, as an Executive, our ongoing concern about recognizing and meeting the needs of our diverse, widespread membership, which includes strengthening our membership base. Within this context, we recently decided upon a number of priorities for the current year, the top three of which follow.

We will continue to develop and promote the CUPARUC Scholarship and Bursary program. Our goal is to ensure a consistent number of awards of a generous value by continuing to grow our endowment and by finding ways to top-up the regular endowment payouts. We are also working with various University offices involved with disbursement policies and payout practices to create good collaborative relationships.

In an effort to grow and maintain our membership base, we are developing and improving our practices with respect to welcoming new members, contacting and recruiting potential members and contacting past members who have let their memberships lapse.

Retiree benefits are always a top concern and in order to receive feedback to inform our efforts on the various University committees on which we sit, such as the Board of Governors Benefits Committee, we are developing ways to consult our members and other retirees as to their preferences with regards to benefits.

On a closing note, as you receive this newsletter the holiday season will be fast approaching. On behalf of the CUPARUC Executive, I wish you all the best for a peaceful holiday and a happy, healthy year ahead.

Message du président
Garry Milton

Dans le dernier bulletin, j’ai évoqué qu’en tant qu’Exécutif, notre préoccupation constante est de reconnaître et de répondre aux besoins de nos membres divers et étendus, ce qui inclut renforcer notre base de membres. Dans ce contexte, nous avons récemment défini un certain nombre de priorités pour l’année en cours, dont les trois premières sont décrites ci-dessous.

Nous continuerons à développer et à promouvoir le programme de bourses d’études CUPARUC. Notre objectif est de garantir un nombre constant de bourses d’une valeur importante en continuant d’accroître notre dotation et en trouvant des moyens d’effectuer des paiements complémentaires à ces versements réguliers. Nous travaillons également avec divers bureaux universitaires impliqués dans les politiques de déboursement et les pratiques de paiement afin de créer de bonnes relations de travail.

Dans le but de développer et de maintenir notre base de membres, nous sommes en train de développer et d’améliorer nos pratiques en matière d’accueil de nouveaux membres, de prise de contact et recrutement de membres potentiels ainsi que de rappel d’anciens membres ayant laissé leur adhésion expirer.

Les prestations et avantages sociaux offerts à nos retraités sont une préoccupation majeure constante. Ainsi, afin de recevoir des commentaires pour éclairer nos efforts sur les divers comités de l’Université auxquels nous siégeons, tel que le Comité des avantages sociaux du Conseil des gouverneurs, nous développons des moyens de consulter nos membres et les autres retraités sur leurs préférences en matière de prestations. Lorsque vous recevrez cette lettre d’information, la période des fêtes approchera à grands pas. Au nom du comité exécutif du CUPARUC, je vous souhaite à toutes et à tous des vacances paisibles et une bonne heureuse année.
A few years ago, Michel Magnan (JMSB, Accounting) and I did a report for the Autorité des marchés financiers that looked at how the different defined-benefits pension funds in Québec reacted to the financial crisis of 2008-2009 when the value of these funds dropped considerably. As you know, we reacted vigorously here at Concordia, and effectively re-tooled the fund over the next five years to be more robust against such extreme market shocks. University funds in principle at least provide an intellectual and social environment where change could be accepted if properly motivated. At the time, we were curious how other funds reacted in extremis.

We were surprised to learn how ill equipped most funds were in so far as their governance structures were cumbersome and slow moving at best and hands off at worst with decisions effectively handed over to consultants. In contrast to this reality, here at Concordia we use consultants to provide input relating to audit, reporting, due diligence and manager search. Ultimately, decisions rest with the Pension Board whose members make vigorous contributions to the decision-making process.

In support of our activities, we have initiated a daylong education gathering where we invite industry experts to make presentations on developments and trends in the pension world. This year’s meeting was held recently in early November where a half dozen speakers enlightened us on different issues. One of my favorites involved a relatively technical discussion on the valuation of private equity portfolios, a difficult topic in so far as these fund managers take equity positions in companies in order to orient their operations for future growth and increased value when eventually sold. It is difficult to assess this progress and accordingly to measure their contributions to our portfolio even on an annual basis. The evaluation of risk in such a context is tricky.

The education workshop ended with a vigorous discussion of ESG principles (Environmental, Social, Governance) led by Marc Gauthier (Concordia Treasurer) and Denis Cossette (Concordia, Chief Financial Officer) and how these may be incorporated in our future approach to portfolio allocation. A suivre.

The Pension Board did meet soon after. The usual post mortem of the educational day was part of the agenda. The Board’s assessment was uniformly enthusiastic with no end of suggestions for topics to be included in next year’s session. This level of engagement should certainly be re-assuring for our members.

When we changed to Sun Life as our principal provider last year it was under the same terms and conditions that we had with Desjardins, and after an initial adjustment period our coverage is now essentially the same as before with a few minor changes. Apart from our own constituency – retirees - our benefits program for employees is quite complicated compared to those at similar universities and other organizations. Because of the large number of unions and associations; full-time, part-time, contract and other employee groups there are 80 different categories of benefits packages with different combinations of benefits such as vision care, dental care, short and long-term disability, etc. This not only leads to higher administrative costs, but our overall program is much more complex than those at other comparable universities.

In that context the Concordia University Benefits Committee, which oversees all retiree and employee benefits and makes recommendations to the Board from time to time concerning changes to these benefits, has been conducting a comprehensive study of all our group insurance plans for over a year. The study is being carried out with the help of consultants and a Working Group, consisting of members of the Benefits Committee. This Working Group has been meeting many times over that period to carry out a detailed study of all our group insurance plans and to begin looking at various options that may be of interest to employees and retirees.

The work is well underway but there are still several important ideas to be discussed, as well as many details and technicalities. At this point it is still too early to report any specific changes that are being considered, but because there is still much work to be done it is unlikely that any proposals will be ready to bring to the Benefits Committee in time to be implemented next year. Once the Working Group formulates a comprehensive set of proposals, there will have to be a period of communication and consultation with all the groups affected by the changes. So it is much more likely that this work will not be finished in time to implement any changes before 2022.

Our current membership stands at 257 which is slightly below last year at this time. This is mainly due to members not yet renewing their membership for 2019-2020. If you have forgotten to renew, there is still time to do so. A membership in CUPA keeps you informed about issues affecting Concordia University pensioners and it is a great way to stay in touch with your former colleagues.

SCHOLARSHIPS & AWARDS FUND
Joanne Locke

We’ve done it again!

For the 2018-2019 academic year, the Concordia University Pensioner’s Association, through its Concordia University Retired Faculty and Staff Scholarships and Awards Endowment program, continued its annual tradition of funding four graduate students and eight undergraduate students. Using the 3.5% annual payout on the Endowment, together with top-up funds from generous donors, Team Pensioners shufflers and sponsors, and minimal monies from the operating fund, we recognized 12 deserving recipients.

Since the establishment of the fund in 2002, we have made an impact on the lives of 204 hard-working students.

Graduate scholarships, each in the amount of $5000, were received by Catalina Marysol Carvajal, PhD, Biology; Tabassom Hamidfar, PhD, Physics; Nicolas Chausseau Gaboriault, MSc, Computer Science; and Talal Toushan, MEng, Electrical and Computer Engineering. Undergraduate scholarships of $1950 were awarded to Rebecca Lalonde, BComm, Major in Management; Shankeetha Amirthalingam, BEng, Industrial Engineering (Co-op); Alexander Simmons, BFA, Major Music Composition; and Chad Buck, BSc, Major in Biology. Undergraduate bursaries of $2000 were gratefully accepted by Isaias Vazquez, BA, Major in Translation; Ruben Bejin, BComm, Major in Business Technology Management; Nikhil Duggal, BEng, Aerospace Engineering (Co-op); and Lisa Troshian, BFA, Major in Art History.

Congratulations to all our student winners and to us as pensioners for our continuing commitment to the support of our students.

THE PERFECT RETIREMENT HOBBY
Barbara Black

I found the perfect retirement hobby — communicating about art.

When I retired from Concordia in 2009 after 16 years in internal communications, I still had plenty of energy. I had taken a guided tour at the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts and thought, “I could do this.”

The MMFA has an unusual system of guides, or docents, as they are often called. There are 167 of us. We help the museum manage our deployment. We have considerable freedom in designing our own tours, and a code of behaviour that resembles that of a professional organization.

Of the 167 guides, two-thirds give their tours in French and one-third in English, roughly representing the demographics of the visitors. Those guides who are able to do so address the visitors in both languages.

The museum doesn’t have to advertise for new guides. Hopeful applicants respond to a query on the museum’s website, and are interviewed. Those accepted are expected to pay for their own training, which soared from about $500 to $1,300 until a subsidy was applied.

Back in 2010 I took a three-month course in art history given by the museum through Concordia. This was followed by three months of instruction on museum policy and guiding etiquette. I prepared an hour-long tour in the Quebec and Canadian collection for an audience of friends and family. It was videotaped and evaluated, and I qualified as a guide. Then I had to learn about the other four permanent collections: European Old Masters, contemporary art, decorative arts and design, and the cultures of the world.

After some experience, new guides are permitted to give tours of the temporary exhibitions. To give these tours I have learned about pre-Colombian artefacts, the eruption of Mount Vesuvius in 79 CE, art glass, indigenous traditions and cowboy movies, Napoleon Bonaparte, African masks and Egyptian mummies. Much of our learning is self-directed, but we also attend academic lectures at the museum on Mondays, when it is closed to visitors. There’s always something new to learn.
As social attitudes evolve, so does our definition of art. The recent opening of the Arts of One World wing is a striking example. Ancient artefacts collected in the 19th century by administrators of the British Empire are sitting among contemporary artworks by their former subjects. We are delighted to see the shedding of patronizing attitudes to other cultures and the truly humanist vision of director Nathalie Bondil.

As you may have noticed, the MMFA embraces a therapeutic view of art. This has led to the growth of research in creative arts therapies and gerontology, and some of the guides are taking an active role in such projects. Many of them have relevant work backgrounds in teaching, science and the caring professions. They are putting their expertise to good use in retirement.

I think the guides have such a strong collective identity because we belong to an association with a board of directors, committees, handbooks and bylaws. We organize trips to museums around the world, and I’ve been lucky enough to visit London, Berlin, Amsterdam, Naples and Mexico City with my guiding friends. We share a passion for art and culture, and we love sharing it with others.

It’s exciting to be linked with one of the great museums of North America. I hope to continue guiding at the museum as long as my legs and my voice hold out. Come and see us sometime!

Dancing with the stars

by alexS

Foxtrot, Rumba, Tango, Waltz, Cha-cha, Samba, Paso Doble, and the Two-Step.

Anyone here knows how to do these steps? Anyone had formal dance lessons?

I do and I did but have to admit that it was just for a specific occasion. Unfortunately there are no long lasting effects of this whole exercise. But it was fun and just like riding a bicycle, you never forget the basics.

That was way back during what I would call the ‘good old days’.

It was a tradition, back in High School, to take dance lessons in anticipation of the graduation party.

Come to think of it, this was a clever move by the adults to get teenagers focused on something and to throw in some additional set of rules about conduct, chivalry, dress code, personal hygiene and general appearance. Putting your best foot forward, so to speak. This was the last chance to exercise some control over teenagers and a final attempt to impart some desirable social behaviour, for those who had not learned those skills at home.

Everyone is dressed to the hilt, new shoes with leather soles, a suit, shirt with cuffs and cufflinks and a tie with a real knot, no clip-on.

May I have this dance?

Finally we’re all lined up facing the young ladies. The idea here was, when the music starts, to approach the young lady opposite you, take a bow, extend your right hand and ask the question – see heading.

The Pressure

There was a lot of pressure going on at that moment, since all the guys and girls knew each other. There were those who already had a girlfriend, those that were going steady, those that had waited for this opportunity to get to pick one, and those that were always picked last for anything.

So the music starts and a mad dash, no, a stampede ensued. There was pushing and shoving to get to your target and if you were lucky, she would gravitate towards you.

I had cleverly discussed that with my date beforehand and had positioned myself opposite her, to have the shortest possible distance between her and me.

The Matchup

After all the dust had settled so to speak, most were matched up, except for a few that wandered around looking for someone to partner with, and the dance teacher goes ‘and a one and a two’, ‘stop’, ‘everyone back to your positions’.

Now we get the lecture on the rules ‘pick the person opposite you, after each set we change partners to your right’.

The Encore

“Music – one, two, three, and a one and a two”. A mad dash, no, a stampede ensued…
